Driving in the cattle. Berchtesgaden is a pretty little Bavarian town of about 2600 inhabitants, situated in the midst of a small principality, the dominions of which were so mountainous and so limited in extent that it was formerly jestingly said to be as high as it was broad. It is customary in these parts when the cattle are brought in from the uplands to the villages for the winter, to decorate them with flowers and streamers, this however only being done if there have not been any accidents in the locality.
